

TERRACE Mirror

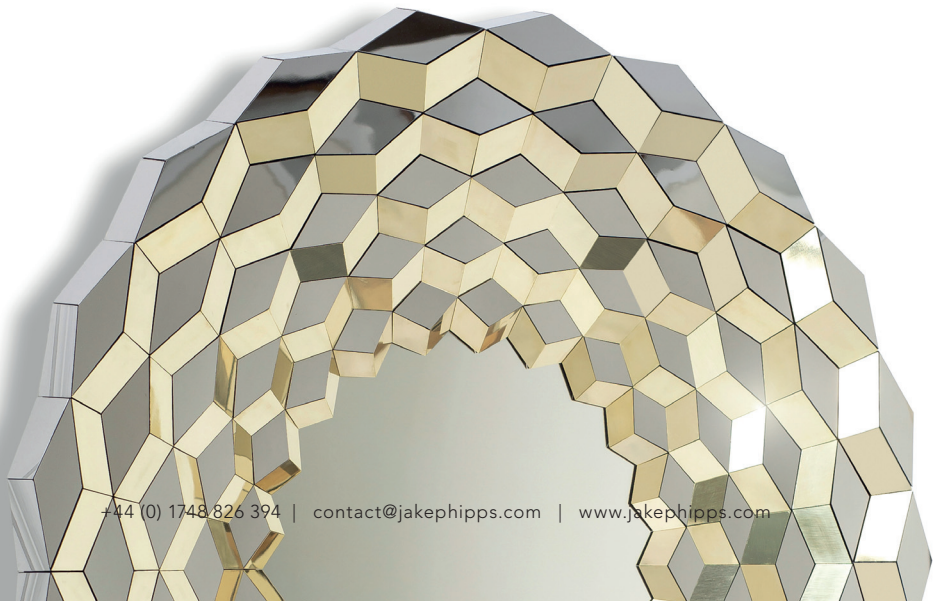

JAKE PHIPPS

Of all things, a long haul flight to China helped inspire this faceted mirror. Paddy fields cut deep into the valley sides, and when seen from the air, catch the early morning light and reflect back flashes of gold from the pools of still water. Or conversely on a clear night the still water can catch and reflect back the blue moonlight.

The Terrace mirror recreates this experience by using multiple sections of mirror polished and coloured steel, all set at varied angles to catch the light as you move past it.
